This Month's Program

Mary Horn

My mom introduced to me photography at an early age. She loved photography too. She gave me an old brownie when I was 8 or 9. I had a one roll a month allowance with an extra roll on holidays. I took photography in High school and really enjoyed working in the darkroom. I continued to shoot mostly black and white in college but eventually converted to taking color slides. My family moved to LA and as life got busier, photography became a vacation only activity for the most part. After moving back to Oklahoma in 2008 I found the Metro Camera Club and thought this would be a great opportunity to get a real DSLR and polish off my all too rusty skills. I have learned so much from the club and really appreciate the opportunity for field trips competition, constructive critique and community. In the late 1990s I began working to restore old family photographs and turned that into a small business in 2008. I have restored hundreds of photographs since then. I am certified by Operation Photo Rescue and have restored photos from super storm Sandy and the recent Moore tornado. In May of 2013, CNN Money interviewed me and featured my business in an article about "Eight Hot Businesses You Can Start Now."
